Aspiring Product Manager & Business Analyst | Startup Enthusiast |
Data-Driven Decision Maker | Passionate about Product Thinking

Summary

Hey there! I'm Sakshi — currently pursuing BTech and actively figuring out how ideas become products, and how those products solve real problems.

Over the past few years, I've worked with early-stage startups in travel, tech, and pet care. From building communities to turning customer feedback into product insights — I've worn many hats, and loved every bit of it. My journey so far has been full of curiosity, collaboration, and caffeine.

Now, I'm diving deeper into product management and business analysis. I spend time studying case studies, mapping user journeys, and exploring what makes a product truly click with its users.

Here's why I might just be a good fit for your team:

I've used market research to guide product tweaks and strategy.

I understand what makes content rank and users stick (hello SEO and retention!).

I've led community initiatives that directly influenced product design.

I can talk to users, read between the lines, and translate it into features.

I'm actively improving my product thinking — every day, one case study at a time.

I believe in building things that make people's lives easier (and maybe even a little more fun). I'm now looking to join a team where I can contribute, learn, and grow in the world of PM and BA.

I live at the intersection of curiosity, customer pain points, and spreadsheets. Ready to bring energy, insights, and a sprinkle of sarcasm to your product or strategy team this summer.

Let's build something great.
